

Festschrift honoring Paul Wong

I've known Paul Wong for nearly 20 years as a close colleague doing research in the area of religion, spirituality and health, particularly with regard to the role that religion plays in people finding meaning and purpose in life. It is difficult to imagine that my colleague Paul has reached the young age of 85 years and is still actively publishing and doing academic work in this area. I have been honored to be a keynote speaker at several of his International Meaning Conferences in the past, and have very much enjoyed my interactions with he and his wife at these events. I consider it a real privilege to be a colleague of his over the years, and hope to do likewise with him for many years to come. May God fill your life with blessings, Paul, on this very special birthday.
